Classification: Safe/DL:3(breach of secrecy)

Containment procedures: While there is currently no absolute way of containment, we are currently working with the SCP foundation to take down any instance that appear on both the dark/deep and surface web. We have also tried a misinformation campaign in which we have managed to give this instance the appearance of a "meme", from our current understanding, no human would suspect this anomalous entity to be anything more of a meme.

Description: A.O.12(or SCP-1294) is simply a "slideshow" of images of anomalous entities both currently known and cataloged by the USACA and SCP foundation and unknown entities. This features a mixture of known SCP entries and USACA entries such as (SCP-939,-096,-173,-[••|•••••|••|•],-035) and (A.O-1,-4,-10). The way how they have managed to attain these images are unknown, especially a photo of -096(looking at the photo of -096 does not trigger its anomalous properties, possibly drawn to high quality). From the current research, this can appear on any social media account, but it prefers ones that host only "memes". These "slideshows" also play music with a calm, peaceful tone, furthering the narrative that this is a "meme".

Notes: The secretary of Anomalous containment and the O5 council of the SCP foundation have deemed that while this does pose a breach of secrecy, the narrative that currently is in place plus the constant take down of these instances off the internet negate this threat. They also state that the unknown anomalous objects that are featured should be hunted down and either contained or neutralized.
